Grand Lodges of the Parks Series: Yosemite's

Ahwahnee

with Glenn Minuth

Over a century ago, some of the nation's most stunning architectural treasures were crafted in our national parks, blending nature with luxury. Visionary architects and railroad partners worked together to elevate the "National Park Service (NPS) rustic design style," creating iconic lodges that still offer unforgettable experiences today. These grand properties mark the early connection between extravagance and nature. First on the list is the Ahwahnee Hotel, considered the flagship of NPS lodges. Designed by Gilbert Stanley Underwood, its "Parkitecture" captures the essence of blending elegance with the natural world, setting a high standard for future park lodges. Join us as we explore the timeless beauty of these architectural masterpieces, where history, design, and nature converge to create an enduring legacy of unforgettable experiences!

An Gorta Mór- The Great Hunger in 1840's Ireland

with Mary Coyle

Ireland is a hauntingly beautiful place, and many generations have loved and lived off its land. Then why did so many leave? Why was the population cut in half? Was there really a potato famine? This is a solemn and sacred tale. In this course, you will learn why millions of Irish people died or emigrated in the 1840's, forever impacting the histories of both Ireland and the United States and generating an extraordinarily influential and ever-growing Irish Diaspora.

Bright, Safe and Efficient: Bringing electricity to Bisbee, rural Cochise County, and Hidalgo County

By Mike Anderson, Historian

Before electricity was harnessed to provide a practical source of light and power, mining towns such as Bisbee were plagued by frequent catastrophic fires caused by kerosene lamps. Bisbee historian Mike Anderson will shed light on the ways by which local businessmen brought electric power to the Warren Mining District in the early 20th century, and will also explain how the federal government later did the same through the Rural Electrification Administration for farms, ranches and small communities throughout southeast Arizona and southwest New Mexico, changing the lives of urban and rural residents for the better in many ways.

Preserving the Past, Sustaining the Present: The Story and Future of Camp Naco

By Jeremy Fricke & Becky Orozco

Step into the remarkable story of Camp Naco, a century-old adobe military post on the Arizona-Sonora border that once housed Buffalo Soldiers and later became home to local families. This lecture traces the site's transformation from a place of defense during the Mexican Revolution to a living symbol of resilience and cultural exchange in the borderlands. Explore how preservation efforts, community partnerships, and educational programs are bringing new life to Camp Naco as a hub for commemoration, creativity, and connection. Through visuals and discussion, we will consider how historic preservation can serve as a catalyst for storytelling, cross-border collaboration, and sustainable community development.

Beyond the Literal: Unpacking Idioms and Phrases

By Glenn Minuth

You have heard them all your life and may have said them, but how did they originate? We will examine some idioms, phrases, colloquialisms, expressions, jargon, locutions, mottos, and slogans. These sayings can be quite confusing on their face values, but they are entertaining to learn about and help you sound like a native speaker. Some are funny enough to evoke a snicker while some are just bizarre! To take an example: An idiom is a phrase or expression that has a figurative meaning, which is different from its literal meaning. They are often used to make jokes or to lighten the mood in a conversation. "The ball is in your court" to attend this brown bag session so come out to "chew the fat" and we will "hit the ground running."

Featured Instructors

Chef Karla Gomez was inspired by her grandmother's love for desserts. Karla began her first dessert business at a young age. Her passion for teaching and sharing Mexican culture shines through every traditional dish she creates. Karla especially enjoys introducing others to time-honored recipes from various regions of her native Mexico. Born in Guadalajara and having lived throughout the country, she brings authentic flavors and stories to the table. In 2008, Karla moved from Fort Hood, Texas, to Sierra Vista, Arizona, where she pursued Culinary Arts at Cochise College, continuing her journey of culinary excellence.

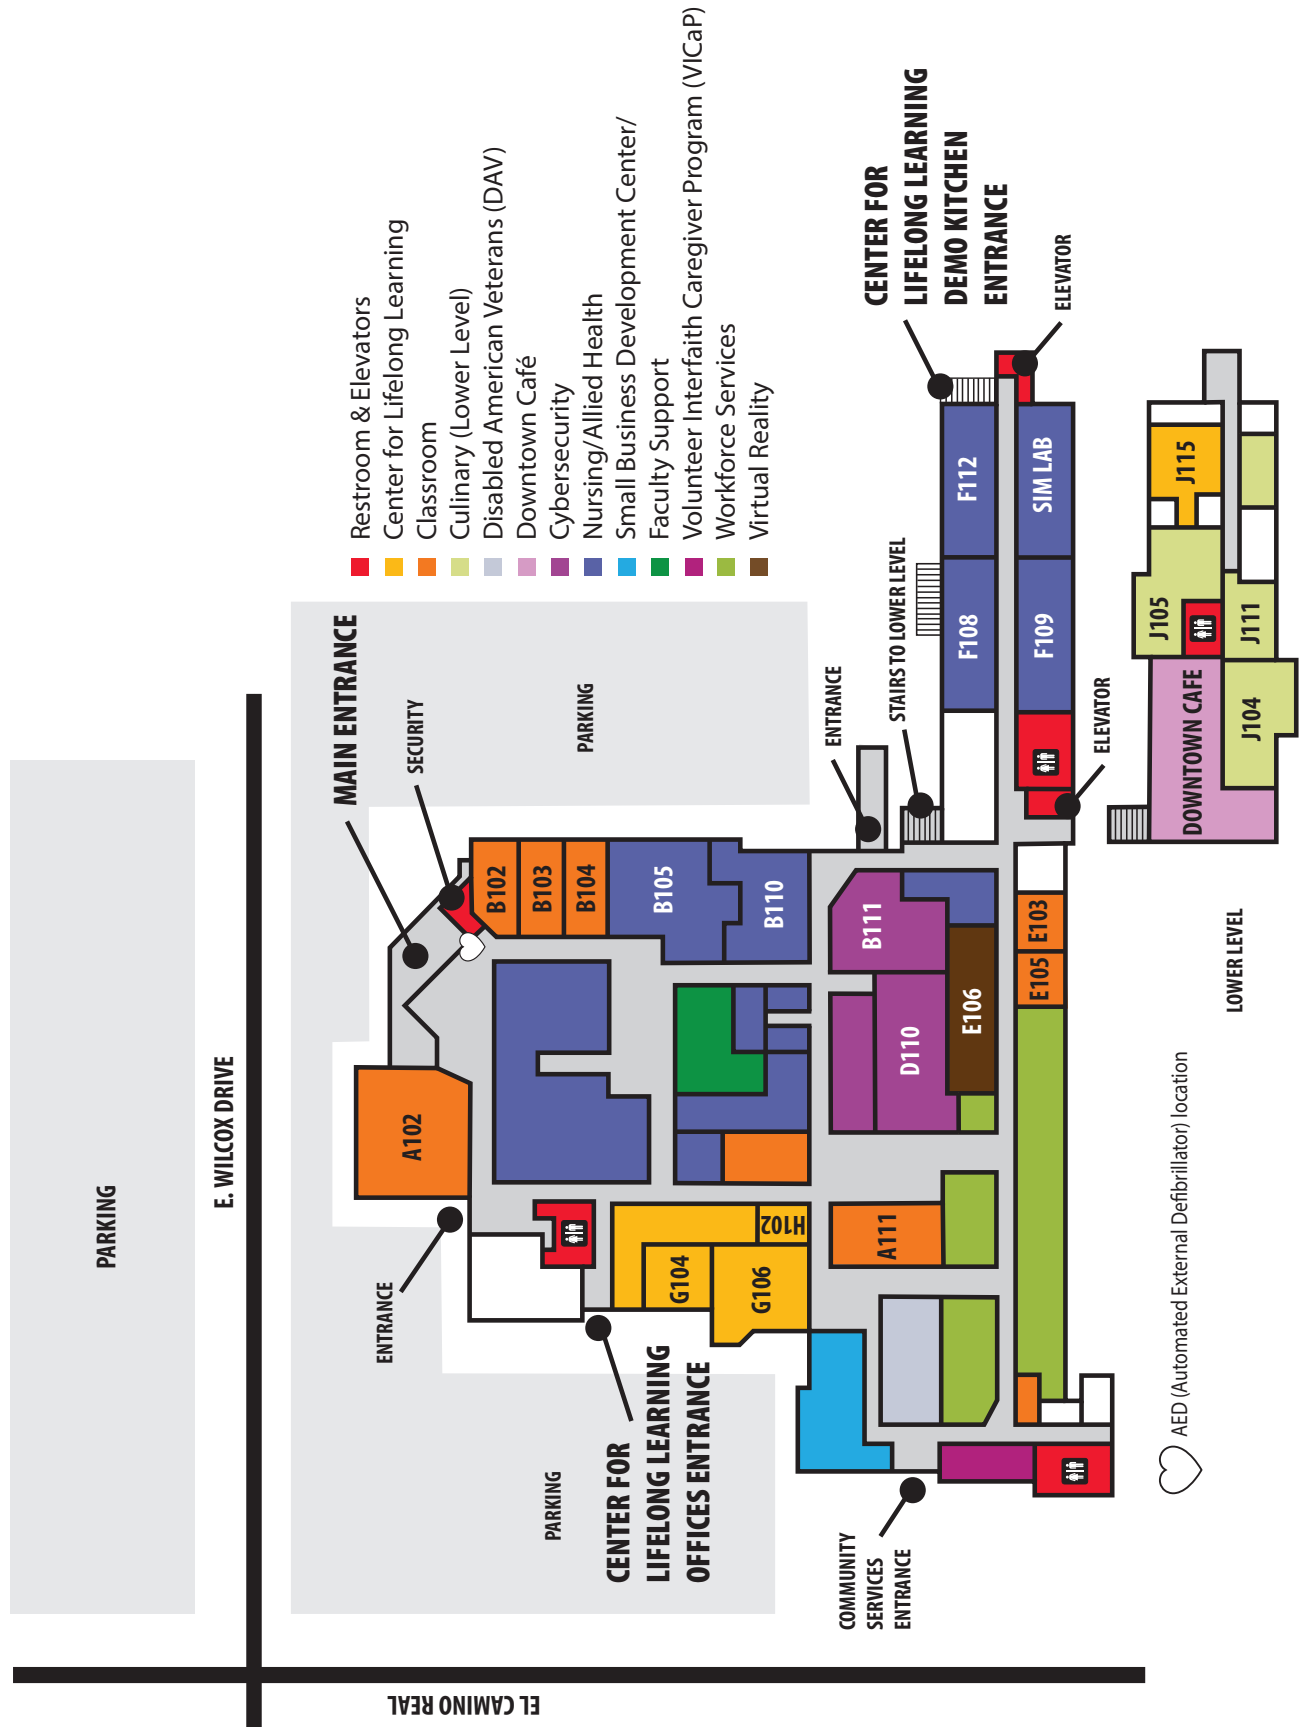

Paula Keith has been the cornerstone of the Center for Lifelong Learning's Mosaic program for the past eight years. Her journey with stained-glass mosaics began over 25 years ago, and since then, she has earned recognition as an accomplished international instructor. During her time at the Center, Paula has expanded the program and guided countless students in creating stunning, one-of-a-kind mosaic art pieces. Her artistic expertise, engaging teaching style, and deep knowledge have cultivated a loyal following of enthusiastic learners. Originally from San Antonio, Texas, Paula now calls Sierra Vista home. When she's not teaching or creating art, she enjoys traveling, scuba diving, and zip-lining.

George Self has been working with computers since 1983, both as a repair technician and a programmer. He first worked with a spreadsheet in 1985 where he used Lotus 1-2-3 in a Masters class. In the late-1990s, George began using Microsoft Office, including Excel, for both work-related and personal projects. George began teaching at Cochise College in 2000 where he used Excel to manage his classes, including developing student rosters and calculating grades. Eventually, George was promoted to Dean where he used Excel to generate statistical summaries and charts for reports. Today, George is retired but uses Excel for numerous teaching and personal projects (ask him about his Tombstone cemetery spreadsheet). He teaches an online class for the University of Arizona College of Applied Science and Technology where he uses Excel to help manage grades. In his spare time, George leads tours for the Goodenough Silver Mine in Tombstone and plays with his cocker spaniels.
