Questions/comments:
Mr. Nelson noted another advantage is the increased communication between the college and the high schools.

Responding to Mr. Quinn, Ms. Richardson stated the dual enrollment course offerings are determined following regular meetings with the high schools, then they determine if there is a credentialed instructor to teach the course requested, and then a list of requested courses are given to the college deans for review and approval. If the course requests are approved, they become part of the Inter-governmental Agreement (IGA), which is signed by the college and the participating school district(s).

Mrs. Strain led a brief discussion regarding the school districts participating in dual enrollment sharing the information with their superintendents and school boards. Dr. Rottweiler expressed the importance of sharing correct information as it pertains to students taking classes in their declared major, or they could experience issues with federal financial aid.

Responding to Mr. Quinn, Dr. Rottweiler led a discussion regarding a proposal potentially to revamp dual credit, reducing the cost of dual enrollment in exchange for the colleges would not return resources to the participating schools.

Mr. Hudgins expressed his appreciation to Ms. Richardson and her team for the presentation and for their support of dual enrollment students.
